A simple online search for “no prescription” generates millions of results — many of them rogue Web sites offering to sell prescription medications without a prescription.

Consumers can be better protected by:

- Requiring search engines to automatically display a PSA warning about the dangers of illegal prescription drugs.
- Authorizing only companies with Verified Internet Pharmacy Practice Site (VIPPS) accreditation from the National Association of Boards of Pharmacy to conduct online advertising.
- Ensuring that all companies selling drugs online comply with the pharmaceutical licensing and survey requirements for every state they send pharmaceuticals.
